"You see that bird," said Clyde, as he patted a corrier on its back. "He can fly a mile a minute and not be winded at the fulsh."

Lane looked at it. "Hub!" he said. "I'll bet you clears he "Well, I'll bot you he can fly from Pe. arsburg in three days."

"Til bet you." replied Fred, "But I got to take him over to Petersburg."

"I'll go you," said Clyde.

Then the bird was handed over to Fred. He put him under his arm and took the electric car to Petersburg.

Before the car left Clyde said:

"Now, it won't be fair to clip his wings."

"Now, it won't be fair to cup as wings." said Fred.
"Naw," said Fred.
On his way over he thought it over.
"It won't be fair to clip his wings," he sollioquized, 'but there was nothing said about plucking the feathers."
Then he pinciked the feathers, and before he reached Petersburg, the bird ladn't a feather but those on his wings and tail.
The bird was turned loose, and Fred. took the next car back to Richmond.
That night he met Clyde at Campboli's, 'Has the bird got back yet?" he asked with a sardonic grin.
"Not yet." said Clyde: "I can't understand it. But I got two days coming to me yet."

The same conversation was gone through with the next day.

"You just as well pay your bet," said "You just as wen pay you.
"Red." "Wait 'till my time's up," said Clyde.
Yesterday they met again at Campbell's.
"How about the bird?" asked Fred.
"Got back." said Clyde; "but, gosh ding

Major Harrison explained that these envelopes had been forwarded to business men, friends of his, who had turned them over to him, and read letters proving his argument. Mr. Harrison positively declared that he had rever connected either Mr. Hepburn or Mr. Clayron with the affair, and knew that they were ignorant of what was being done under their frank.

Mr. Harrison read from a pamphlet the following sentence: "I can reach a thousand people for a dollar by using franked envelopes."

thousand people for a donar by being franked envelopes."

"Who said that?" demanded half a dozen of the committee in a breath.

"The Rev. Dr. W. F. Crafts," remarked Mr. Harrison, sarcastically, "who describes himself in this book as being chairman of the third House of Congress, Christian Lobbyist, and Treasurer of the Reform Association."

The committee broke into hearty laughter over these titles, and concluded to adjourn and investigate the matter further.

Dr. Mary Walker There.

A large number of German clergymen appeared before the committee this morning in opposition to the bill, and two notable personages who opposed it were Dr. Mary Walker and Miss Phoebe Cousina. The "Doctor" was dressed as Cousins. The "Doctor" was dressed as of yore, in a black freek suit, and advanced in a very genteel and "gentlemarly" manner to the stand. She told the committee, in her piping voice, if they passed the law, they could not enforce it.

Miss Cousins said she had once been an ardent prohibitionist, but had come to the conclusion that prohibition was a failure anyendering vice and hypocrisy, Mr. Oberman's Pointed Speech.

the conclusion that prohibition was a failure engagement by the can hypocrist and hypocrist.

Mr. Oberman's Pointed Speech. The speech of the day was made by George J. Oberman, a brewer of Baltit more, who spoke briefly, but to the point. He declared that the larger the decrease in the manufacture of spirituous liquors. Turning to the temperance conzingent, Mr. Oberman said: "You cannot enforce prohibition in this country, and that's as true as it is that God made little apples." Mr. Oberman said: he was the first brewer who had ever appeared before a committee in opposition to prohibition. "Heristofore, we have been slient under all attacks, but I think now is the time for me to speak," continued Mr. Oberman, "You can reason this thing form a common sense standpoint, that as you tell a man he cannot have a thing, he will move Heaven and earth to get II. I say to my good friends, the temperance people in the language of Shakespeare: Because you are virtuous, shill we not have cakes and ale?"

Mr. Oberman, continuing, said the question of prohibition had no place before the committee, but they had to consider the personal liberty of men, Mr. Oberman commoned sarcastically on the fact has when he was in Des Moines the committee, whit they had to consider the personal liberty of men, Mr. Oberman ago, a city of 46,559 people, they and 169 drugstores where they sold fluor under the rose." The young woman who took the first prize deserved it, without a doubt. She bad herself done up in tissue paper, was but in a large pasteboard box, and was delivered by express at the house at the incheen hour, addressed to the hostess. During the unwinding process in the barlor she made no sign, and when head, arms, feet and body had been relieved of the enfolding paper, a perfect French babe was revealed, who said "Papa" and "Mamma" in a nice little machinery voice and who stepped out of the box and across the flow with the mincing gait of a walking doil. All sorts and could-tons of dolls were there—Chinese, Japanese and darky dolls, with baby and nurse dolls, and a clever initiation of a rag doil. One girl went as a worsted doll, dressed in a knitted wool skirt and golf sweater, golf stockings and worsted bootees.—Harper's Bazar.

ILLINOIS IS INJURED BY THE MISSOURI Sent to New York for Repairs and Court of Inquiry to Fix

Responsibility.

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3 .- Rear-Admiral Barker cables the Navy Department from Guantanamo, under yesterday's date, as follows:

"On making passage from Guantanamo to Pensacola, Fla., the Missouri's steam steering gear became dirabled and she collided with the Illinois, damaging the age to the Illinois is very serious or that it will take any considerable length of time to make the necessary repairs. Should these be completed without much delay, the Illinois will accompany the squadron to European waters, as originally planned. The accident to the Illinois is deplored all the more because by ordering her to New York, the men will be deprived of their target practice and thus be prevented from securing their proper rating. Miss Schapiro to Wed.

collided with the Illinois, damaging the port propeller of the latter, but with slight injury to herself. The Illinois has Leen ordered to the navy-yard at New Tork to have her propeller replaced."

Beyond this information the officials of the Bureau of Navigation state they have nothing. As is the usual course for procedure in such cases, the admiral in command will appoint a court of inquiry to fix the responsibility. It is not relieved at the department that the dam-
